we're all in this together

This year has proved challenging in ways that we could have never predicted—and that holds for climate action too.

As you flip through these pages, you will see the story of progress made, great work accomplished despite headwinds and uncertain outcomes.

That we face many urgent crises at once can feel daunting. But it is also an opportunity to take them on together. As we invest in a clean and just recovery to build back better, we need to address long-term systemic racism and to protect public health, if we are to have a stable climate and a clean energy economy that works for everyone, not just a few.

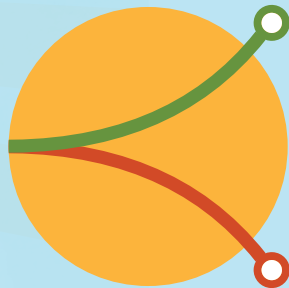

This is an inflection point—this can be our moment to create the change we need and come together for a brighter future. It will take stick-to-itiveness, tenacity and perseverance.

We do have forward momentum; and anchored in our values, we have much to do in these hard times.

Stay safe. Thank you for your support and continued investment in and with Climate Solutions. It's good to be in this together.

Gregg Small
Executive Director

Savitha Reddy Pathi
Savitha Reddy Pathi,
Deputy Director

In 1997, I worked in the US EPA's Policy office during the Kyoto Protocol climate negotiations. I have now worked over half my life on climate change—the biggest social justice issue of our lifetimes. I feel hope about climate action, even on the days where I question my resolve.

After the People's Climate March in New York City in 2014, I received a white rock at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine and it now sits on my living room mantle. It's a reminder of my grounded commitment to this work, of how much has happened and how much more needs to happen—an ever-present symbol for needed action. In honor of my family who live in my birthplace of India, and my young nieces who live close by, I am going to do whatever I can to stop the climate crisis from getting worse.

We are making progress—but we need to move much faster to take on the fossil fuel industry. It really is “the fierce urgency of now.” Thank YOU for supporting Climate Solutions.

THE FIERCE URGENCY OF NOW

Savitha Reddy Pathi (Climate Solutions) with Alberto Rodriguez and Lyliaana Allala (Seattle Office of Sustainability and Environment)

we know we must act

Climate advocates carry a constant dissonant reality. We know the daunting challenge, but we know we must act. For our casually concerned friends, we avoid despondent paralysis by emphasizing progress and individual actions. Folks in the thick of it, like the Climate Solutions team, know it will take all that and much, much more—requiring the perseverance to drive huge systemic change. I don't really know how they do it, but for me it's about four driving factors:

On top of that is the joy of working beside like-minded, big-hearted people, fighting against long odds, aligning with new partners, and looking out for those who will be impacted first and worst.

The problems are obvious—roads choked with cars and trucks, McMansions barely occupied, influential polluters...

The solutions are working—renewable power, electric vehicles, clean buildings, policy coalitions...

The opposition is active—funding confusion, denial, fear and power all the way into our Supreme Court... and

The imperative is clear—where failure means unspeakable consequences at home and around the world.

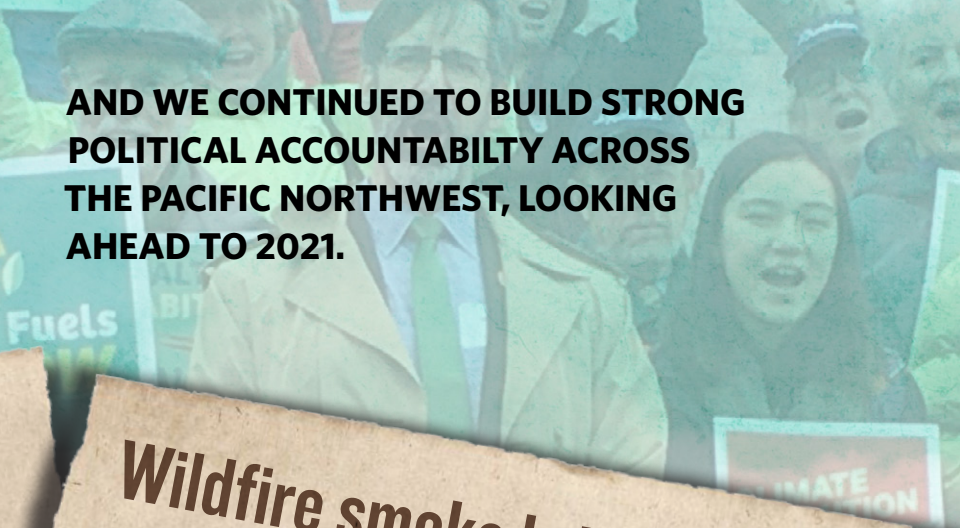

Each is a powerful motivator. Combined, they are a potent fossil-free fuel for action. On top of that is the joy of working beside like-minded, big-hearted people, fighting against long odds, aligning with new partners, and looking out for those who will be impacted first and worst. That keeps me going.

ALL ELECTRIC BUILDINGS ARE GOOD FOR OUR CLIMATE, OUR HEALTH, AND OUR SAFETY.

In Washington State, emissions from buildings are growing at a faster rate than any other source of carbon pollution, with this increase largely attributable to the use of fossil gas in homes and buildings. Combusting fossil gas in homes and buildings is not only a significant contributor to climate change, but also poses significant health risks for our communities, children, and other vulnerable populations.

Many cities are increasingly looking at ensuring all new buildings are electric as a cost-effective pathway for achieving their local climate goals. Electrifying buildings is a key strategy for reducing greenhouse gas emissions and improving air quality.

Climate change is not a faraway problem that no one can fix. We have so many solutions already... And as solutions grow, they will generate broader engagement. We have a responsibility to leave a legacy of a stable climate and a livable planet for future generations. When you include Climate Solutions in your will or other estate plans, you become a part of that legacy. You are investing in the long-term success of our region's response to the climate crisis.

Our Climate Legacy Circle recognizes the climate heroes that are making a long-term investment in a livable future, and honors their lasting generosity which will benefit generations to come.

If you've already included Climate Solutions in your legacy plans—or if you'd like to join our Climate Legacy Circle—we'd love to hear from you. Please contact development@climatesolutions.org. Thank you!
